

In response to a question regarding the use of individual communion cups, Sister White said: "No; I have had nothing to say about that, because I have had no light on the subject. Whatever others say, they get it from some other source than me. They must deal with the ~~quakerian~~ matter according to their best judgment and conviction. I would not attempt to say anything about it. I have nothing to say for or against the use of individual communion cups. I am silent on the subject, because I do not want to speak on my own authority. I do not want to speak on some one's else light. When there are things that I know I should say, I dare not keep silent. I dare not hold my peace, and the Lord sustains me in bearing my testimony. But I have no advice to give in regard to the question just asked me.

An interview of Eld Swinn with Sister White (This was given to me by Eld. G. A. Swinn, D. G. Langley)

When asked whether those who ~~have~~ had died in the message would be among the ^{one} hundred and forty-four thousand, Sister White said: "O yes; those who have died in the faith will be among the ^{one} hundred and forty-four thousand. I am clear on this matter.
